Input from over 300 event companies and event stakeholders worldwide

What are the key trends in the use of technology to harvest audience response and interaction globally and in local markets?

How is the event industry adapting to accommodate the role of Interactive Event Technology?

What value do event owners place on the gathering of data and information at events and meetings?

What key features do event owners value most from Interactive Event Technology?
INTRODUCTION

Over recent years our industry has evolved as technology advancements occur and philosophies on shared intelligence develop. IML Worldwide’s global reach and 20 years experience means we have a unique perspective on these changes; many of which we have led or significantly contributed to.

We are always interested in listening to our clients and industry colleagues to understand their perspectives about the direction of our industry and gaining more insight about what is important to them; it is this ethos that led to the commissioning of the survey.

There have been a number of interesting findings and a summary of the research can be found on page 15 of this document. One thing is clear - our industry continues to change at pace as do the opportunities represented by the new technologies available within it. This is a major opportunity for our industry, coming at a time when ‘Return on Investment’ is becoming a prerequisite.

Moving forward, the informed meeting stakeholder will need to recognize the merits of the different opportunities available; selecting and incorporating them into their events accordingly.

Please enjoy the findings and if you would like to discuss any of them in more detail with either myself or my team please get in touch.

Regards

“We get feedback from delegates on the speakers, as well as the general organization of the event, amongst other things. We find it better to get the information onsite, instead of expecting the delegates to complete questionnaires afterwards, which they then don’t do.”

EVENT MANAGER, EVENT INDUSTRY SUPPLIER

“We gathering insight ensures we are presenting at the right audience level and enables us to tailor the topics, ask questions and establish general patterns in the crowd.”

MARKETING MANAGER, LEGAL COMPANY
How important is interactive event technology in contributing to a measurable return on investment for an event?

- Very important: 43.9%
- Quite important: 36.9%
- Not important: 11.7%
- Vitally important: 7.5%

Do you believe that your organization could do more to maximize the insight gained via interactive event technology at events?

- Agree: 71.4%
- Strongly agree: 17.7%
- Disagree: 8.9%
- Strongly disagree: 2%

How important is interactive event technology in contributing to a measurable return on investment for an event?

- Yes, much more important: 58.1%
- Yes, a bit more important: 21.0%
- Yes, it will become one of the most important aspects of an event: 18.8%
- No: 2.1%

“Use of this technology to invite audience participation requires engaged and capable meeting facilitators/chairmen to make sure the interaction is being taken full advantage of.”

PUBLICATIONS DIRECTOR, COMMUNICATIONS AGENCY
“Having attended events where interactive event technology is used, the benefits are almost self explanatory, such as instant reactions, gauging audience participation and a general sense of a slick well run event.”

CEO, NOT FOR PROFIT

In what particular areas of events will it become more important?

- Level of audience engagement: 56.3%
- Ability to measure Return on Investment: 12.9%
- Level of entertainment: 3.9%
- Level of data/insight gained: 19.7%
- Driving business strategy: 7.2%

How much of a difference has interactive event technology made to events in the past 5 years?

- No difference: 4.5%
- Small difference: 34.4%
- Major difference: 53.3%
- It’s made the biggest difference: 7.8%
Data gathering from delegates at events and conferences is important for event stakeholders (over 90% agree).

Event stakeholders already utilize a variety of technologies to gather audience insight (including texting, social media and data tracking) and over 60% believe that interactive event technology has made a major or the biggest difference to events in the past five years. What’s more over 75% also believe that interactive event technology will become either much more or one of the most important components of events in the future.

There are two main ways in which event stakeholders believe interactive event technology will become more important in the future - to increase audience engagement at events (56%) and to facilitate data and insight gathering (20%) - both these factors point to the stakeholder wishing to maximize the input of delegates - getting the most from each whilst they are a captive audience at an event. As for post event feedback, over 85% believe this is becoming more important.

Whilst cost is a factor when selecting interactive event technology - it is not the main factor - more stakeholders are concerned with Ease of Use (41%), Functionality (22%) and Reliability and Stability (20%). However, return on investment is an important factor for 90% of survey respondents.

With the increasing use of technology within events so grows the belief that it is important to obtain specialist advice to assist in the maximization of insight ‘harvesting’ at events. 95% of survey respondents believe specialist advice is important and 95% believe interactive event technology is important in terms of maximizing an event’s overall success. Given the wealth of technology options and delivery platforms available it is not surprising that event stakeholders believe they need specialist guidance and consultancy in this area of event management.

The missed opportunity – Currently nearly 90% of event stakeholders believe they could do more to maximize the insight they gather via technology at events. An important statistic considering 95% also believe the insight gathered at events is important in driving business decisions and strategy.
